Contributions to Life Insurance

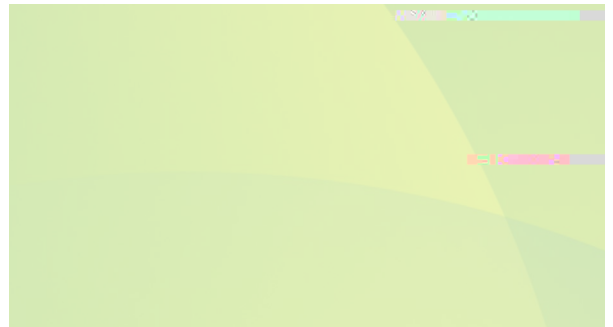

Contributions to life insurance are made by the insured or the policyowner.

Your contributions

Contributions to life insurance are made by the insured or the policyowner. The contributions are made in the form of premiums. The amount of the premium depends on the type of policy and the amount of the death benefit. The premium is paid periodically, usually monthly or quarterly. The premium is deducted from the policyowner's account. The premium is also used to pay the cost of the insurance. The premium is also used to pay the cost of the policy.
